Over the years, groundwater has been the source for our community's drinking water. It has been readily available and relatively inexpensive. Over-pumping this finite resource, however, has caused our critical aquifers to decline.

We are currently constructing an entirely new water delivery infrastructure to comply with a mandated conversion from groundwater to surface water that will allow our aquifers to recharge.

Let's face it, the days of cheap and plentiful water are history! Please join the growing number of folks who understand how important it is to use our finite water resources wisely.

Before turning on the faucet, the shower, or the sprinkler system, ask yourself, "Is it worth the water?"
